Shipping Disrupted and Communication Paralyzed by West Indian Storm

FLORIDA INTO GULF

Storm Leaves Southernmost State; Caution Taken In the Gulf

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 5.—Leaving in its wake three people dead, more than a hundred injured, disrupted shipping, paralyzed communication, and heavy property damage, the West Indian hurricane left Florida and went out to the Gulf of Mexico early today. Expected to increase in intensity after it strikes across open sea, the storm menaced shipping.

All storm warnings were hauled down from the United States Weather Bureau at Jacksonville that danger to the mainland was past, but caution was still taken, especially in the Gulf.

Miami faced a water famine, preventing the sufficient pressure to supply certain sections of the community. The steamship Florida and the steamship Sneland, both freighters, were disabled and sent out distress signals, but today were reported out of danger.

Heavy crop damages were reported in the storm section. The crops in the region of the Redland district, south of Miami, were a total loss.

Miami streets were littered with debris and electric wires, uprooted trees, telephone poles, overturned automobiles and smashed billboards. Fallen power wires were a menace to lives. Police, sheriffs, and war veterans patrolled the streets to prevent looting and to protect the people from stepping on live wires.

Expresses Japan's Ire

Tokyo, Japan, Nov. 5.—Warning that Japan will take forceful steps when they are ready, War Minister Kawashina today expressed Japan's ire over developments indicating Chinese co-operation with Britain and Soviet Russia.

Leaving for the annual Japan military maneuvers, the war minister told I. N. S. today:

"Japan is skeptical of the utility of final reformation in China," he said. "China appeared not to have had any intention to co-operate with Japan, so Japan will be ready to take forceful action if necessary."

Song Service To Make New Hymnals Familiar

After five years of labor, the United Commission, consisting of 36 members from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the Methodist Protestant Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, have produced a revised hymnal for the use of the three denominations. These new hymnals are now being sent out to all parts of the country as fast as they can be printed. In fact the printing presses cannot begin to keep up with the avalanche of orders received.

The Methodist Church of Bristol placed an order for 100 books last August and they are now being delivered. There are 210 hymns, and 206 tunes, which were not in the former hymnal. Some 70 hymnals of churches in England and America were carefully studied before the present book of 565 hymns was completed. New ritual, responsive readings, chants and canticles also enrich the book.

A song service to get acquainted with this hymnal will be held in the auditorium of the Bristol church tomorrow evening, beginning promptly at 7.30 p. m. Dr. George W. Henson, D. D., will be present to interpret the hymns and to lead in the singing. All the members and friends as well as the public in general are invited to share in this fellowship of music and song. It will be an inspiration and a joy to all who love great music.

A service of dedication of the new hymnals will be held at the regular hour of service Sunday morning.

Penn's Manor Husband Starts Divorce Action

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 5.—In the Court of Common Pleas, here, John H. Patterson has filed a libel in divorce charging his wife, Harriet N. Patterson, with cruel and barbarous treatment.

According to the libel in the Prothonotary's office, they were married February 6, 1919, in Philadelphia.

Both the libellant and the respondent, who gave their address as Bordentown Road, Penna. Manor, Falls township, are living in the same house.

HANDS DOWN OPINION IN BENSALEM CASE

MISCELLANEOUS CASES

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 5.—At a session of miscellaneous court here today, Judge Calvin S. Boyer filed an opinion of interest to road supervisors of Bucks county in a proceeding brought by the Supervisors of Bensalem township to take over and maintain Maple street in that township which was dedicated by the owners as a public highway.

The owners had filed a plan of the street with the supervisors and asked for their approval of the plan. This approval was granted and the supervisors thereupon petitioned the Court of Quarter Sessions, under the Act of May 1, 1933, for permission and authority to take over and hereafter maintain Maple street as a public road.

A number of taxpayers filed a remonstrance claiming that there was no authority in law for this proceeding and that the supervisors were limited to the methods provided by the old road law of 1836.

The Court, however, in its opinion, held that the proceeding under the Act of 1933 was proper and that under that act the Court could authorize the supervisors to take over the street as a public road. The Court made an order authorizing the taking over of Maple street as a public road.

Edward V. Hill, of Louisiana, who was convicted of forgery, was paroled by Judge Calvin S. Boyer and turned over to Northampton county authorities who have lodged a detainer for him.

Dr. John N. Rich testified the defendant was suffering from a blood condition which could not be adequately treated in the Bucks County Prison. For this reason, Judge Boyer granted the parole on the condition that he undergo treatment for his illness in the Eastern prison which is equipped to care for him.

In the Court of Common Pleas a divorce was granted upon the payment of costs to Viola W. Holtzworth versus William C. F. Holtzworth, by Judge Calvin S. Boyer. The libellant resides at Rose avenue and River Road, Croydon, and the respondent on Avalon avenue, Croydon. The respondent was charged with cruel and barbarous treatment.

In the Orphans' Court, a petition of Francis J. Byers and Farmers National Bank of Bucks County, to sell unconverted personal estate of Ferdinand Wiedemer, Bristol township, was filed. A widow's inventory was filed in the estate of John W. Bowman, Perkaskie. A petition for appointment of an auditor in the estate of William G. Dimmig, Milford township, was also filed.

A petition of Frances Ebener for appointment of guardian in the estate of Frances Ebener, that the Court appoint the Doylestown National Bank and Trust Company as guardian, was filed.

In the Court of Common Pleas, President Judge Hiram H. Keller handed down an opinion to set aside sheriff's sale in the case of Lawrence G. Taylor, individually and as trustee of the estate of Sallie D. Dinnee, deceased, versus Sallie D. Bailey and ordered that the costs of this rule be taxed as part of the costs of execution and to be paid by the plaintiff.

In an equity action in which Samuel C. Satterthwaite and Lillie Satterthwaite are the plaintiffs and the Yardley Building and Loan Association is the defendant, Judge Keller in his opinion stated the plaintiff's bill of complaint be dismissed; plaintiff pay the costs of proceedings.

In the case of Margaret F. Spencer versus Henry Chapin in an action on a motion for a new trial, President Judge Keller stated in his opinion that the motion for a new trial is overruled and a new trial refused. Judgment is directed to be entered in favor of the defendant in accordance with the verdict.

In an action in replevin in which W. G. Runkles Machinery Co. is the plaintiff and James H. Slater, Sr., James H. Slater, Jr., Sarah Brown are the defendants, Judge Keller in his opinion directed that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for the recovery of one Do-all tractor with cultivator, change over parts, extension, rims and pulley of the value of $300 and $20 damages, making a total of $320.

That the defendants pay the costs of these proceedings.

MADMAN'S PAINTINGS, WORTH THOUSANDS, BECOME U. S. SHOW

Vincent Van Gogh's Best, Which He Valued at $100 Each, Now "Priceless" and Classics

By George Kennedy
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(INS)—Six pictures painted in an insane asylum and now valued in excess of $100,000 were unveiled here today with reverent ceremony.

The partial collection of the artist's work now on view is valued at more than a million dollars yet the total he received for his paintings during his life was $84.

One picture in particular he was proud of. In an expansive moment he estimated that it ought to be worth $100. It sold recently for $50,000.

The occasion for this story of contrasting values is the opening of a show which signals for America the elevation to the rank of the great modern masters of the 19th century of the youthful and tragic Dutch genius, Vincent Van Gogh.

The collection of 65 Van Gogh paintings most of them from Holland and never seen in America before, is now at the Modern Gallery. They will be shown later in Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland and San Francisco.

"I am thinking of decorating my studio with half-a-dozen sunflowers," Van Gogh wrote from the south of France to his brother Theo, whose faithful support, monetarily and otherwise, was well repaid later. "It will be a decorative effect in which the glaring or broken tones of the chromes will stand out vividly against a background of variegated blue. It will produce the sort of effect that Gothic church windows do."

It was one of these pictures that sold for $50,000. Another is in the present collection. Theo's son owns pictures in this show valued at several hundred thousand.

But there was never wealth for Vincent, who gave to modern decoration a brilliant new yellow and whose paintings in reproduction, yellow fields of grain and portraits with yellow backgrounds, are now dominating the art stores.

After attempting a life as an evangelist, this intense son of a Calvinist pastor went to the Province to paint. His models were the postman and his landlady. Sam Levisohn would not take $100,000 for the portrait of the latter, "L'Arlesienne," one of the gems of the collection housed in his New York home.

Van Gogh's intense emotionalism was evident on the canvas even in the delineation of a peaceful village scene.

He had befriended Gauguin, another of the great modern masters, in Paris and the latter came to see him. One day Van Gogh's nerves broke. He threatened his friend with a knife. The next day in remorse he cut his own ear off. Another story is that he cut off the ear when a waitress repulsed his advances and sent it to her wrapped in paper.

At any rate he cut off the ear and his self portrait with the member missing is in the present collection.

Madness was not far off. He was placed under the care of an alienist.

NEWTOWN FARMER IS INJURED DURING FIRE

Loss is $3,000; Machine Shop, Wagon House, Autos Destroyed

BLAME THE WIRING

NEWTOWN, Nov. 5.—A Newtown Township farmer, Alfred H. Luff, of the Newtown-Richboro Road, sustained burns about the hands in fighting a fire at his farm Sunday night.

The blaze, attributed to defective wiring, destroyed the machine shop and wagon house on the Luff farm. In the wake of the fire lay the remains of two automobiles, farm implements, and a tractor.

The house and barn were saved. Entire loss is placed at $3,000.

Luff had been working earlier in the day on one of the cars. When he noticed the blaze he ran to the machine shop and tried to fight the flames. His injuries were treated by a physician.

Calls were sent to firemen from Newtown, Southampton, Trevoise and Richboro, who answered the alarm.

Farewell Social Tendered Donald Clemens, Yardley

YARDLEY, Nov. 5.—A farewell party for Donald Clemens, a leader of the Yardley Boy Scouts, was held on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Lear, Mr. Clemens and his family will move this week to West Chester where Mr. Clemens has secured a position.

After an evening spent in dancing and games, refreshments were served to Annette Gallagher, Kathryn Rothermel, Betty Peters, Janet Smith, Janet Gilmore, Miriam Gallagher, Edna Johnson, Marie Parks, Elvin Cooney, Spencer Parks, Marshall Duerr, Lamar DeSaut, William Crouthamel, Paul Rothermel, Donald Clemens, Jr., Chester Lear, Jr., Donald Clemens, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Lear.

But he continued to paint, brilliantly. The pictures are here to prove it. He shot himself and died on July 29, 1890; at the age of 37.

His fame has been growing since. Only last year a biography of Vincent Van Gogh entitled "Lust for Life" by Irving Stone became a best seller.

211 Projects Await Approval

Harrisburg, Nov. 5.—Secretary of Highways Warren Van Dyke today announced a detailed list of 211 highway construction and improvement projects now awaiting approval in Washington under Pennsylvania's $9,347,797 Federal Works Program.

The submitted projects, Van Dyke said, will provide 7,000,000 men with direct employment in the improvement of 430 miles of highways. About 80% of the total allotment is reported on today's project. The work includes betterment of the Federal road outside of municipalities; the Federal system within municipalities; state rural roads in municipalities, and township roads. Secondary projects on state highways outside of municipalities, included Bucks County 3,903 miles on route 132.

Roosevelts "Gloomed" Over Election

While the President and Mrs. Roosevelt prepared to exercise their own franchises on the voting machine in Hyde Park Town Hall this morning their close friends predicted a Democratic set-back. In New York State the "ins" are fighting desperately to retain their infinitesimal in the assembly; in Kentucky where a party rift has endangered the candidates' chances and in Philadelphia where the Democrats are trying to elect a mayor for the first time in modern political history. These predictions went to the record book to prove that the votes were in favor of the Republicans in these three being given national attention.

MANY BENEFIT THROUGH NEWTOWN MAN'S WILL

One Prominent As Barber Many Years Leaves Over $76,000

ASSISTANT BENEFITS

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 5.—Churches, library, cemetery companies, as well as employees, are to benefit as the result of a will made by Clayton Keller, who for 46 years was the leading barber of Newtown borough. Over $76,000 was left.

A trust fund of $20,000 is established by plans in the will, for John M. Weasner, who for a number of years had been employed by the late Mr. Keller. This sum is in trust in the First National Bank and Trust Company of Newtown. The interest is to be paid semi-annually. Mr. Weasner was also bequeathed the barber business, equipment, etc., of the deceased.

At the death of the beneficiary, the trust fund is to be divided: $5,000 to Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Littlestown, Pa.; $5,000 to Newtown Cemetery; $2,000 to Redeemers-Reformed Church, Littlestown; $2,000 to the First National Bank, interest to the use of the Trustees of the Newtown Presbyterian Church for upkeep of the old graveyard on Sycamore street; $2,000 to the First National Bank and Trust Company, interest to the use of the managers of the Newtown Library to buy magazines and periodicals; $1,000 to vestry of St. Luke's P. E. Church, Newtown; $1,000 to the trustees of First Baptist Church, Newtown; $1,000 to Newtown Friends Meeting; and $1,000 to Newtown Methodist Church.

The will provides two $25,000 trust funds for his brothers, Charles B. and Harry Keller, Charles having died the income from $50,000 goes to the surviving brother, Harry, of Littlestown, as does the residuary estate.

Upon his death this trust is to be

Besides her husband, a retired carpenter, she leaves four daughters, Misses Helen and Blanche Dunbracco and Mrs. Fred Lake, living at home, and Mrs. Jessie Barnhill, of Fallsington; five brothers, Harry Dickel, of Morrisville; John, of Yardley; George, of Arlington, N. J.; Charles, of Harrisburg, and William, of Trenton; two sisters, Mrs. John Brearley, of Orlando, Fla., and Mrs. Granville Stradling, of Newtown, and two grandchildren.

CROYDON SEASCOUT IS RECIPIENT OF HONORS

Charles Kogel Has Quartermaster Seascout Award Presented Him

AT BRIDGE OF HONOR

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 5.—

"I am presenting to you Able Seascout Charles Kogel, member of the Seascout Ship 'Rainbow Clipper' of Croydon, the highest recognition in the seascout program. What is this going to mean to you? I hope it is going to open new avenues of community service and leadership to youth. Accept this quartermaster seascout award as your guiding symbol of service to others," said County Boy Scout Commissioner William Burgess, Jr., Morrisville, as he made the award to Seascout Kogel. Kogel is a member of the Bucks County Council Ship Rainbow Clipper, one of only three quartermaster ships in the United States, the others being located at Chicago, and Kansas. The presentation took place during the annual Seascout Ball and Bridge of Honor of the Bucks County Seascouting Council, conducted in the auditorium of the Bensalem high school, Cornwells, Saturday evening.

Commodore Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, was very gracious in his welcome to all those who were in attendance. The salty Mayor of Morrisville was full of his noted good humor, and made everyone feel at home. Mr. Stockham extended the thanks of those present and the Bucks County Council to Neighborhood Commissioner Harry E. Oliver, the officers and men of the host ship, The Wasp, the members of the Andalusia Group Committee, and the Woman's Auxiliary of the same community for the delightful welcome they had given, the decorating of the auditorium, and the refreshments.

Later in the evening, Mr. Stockham awarded the Long Cruise Badges and Bars, saying, "Life will recognize you for everything worthwhile that you do. It will not always be by a badge as the greatest expression will be shown by the respect from your friends. You have learned through becoming eligible for the awards to sacrifice for the good of the group, and to always give teamwork."

"I am delighted to be here this evening, as your President, to attend your annual social occasion and ceremonies. This is my first time with you. It is a pleasure for me to greet each Seascout, and leader, to compliment you on your very effective work. Seascouting is valuable in keeping your life attuned to your Scout Oath and Law. I am hopeful we can extend this older boy-young man program to make it available to many more of our Bucks County young men," said President C. Wilson Roberts of the Bucks County Seascouting Council as he presented the leadership certificates for those Seascouts and Leaders having taken advanced training.

"I hope each of you will receive considerable benefit from your attainment of the Ordinary Seascout Badge," said Neighborhood Commissioner Harry E. Oliver as he made the award. Group Committeeman William Lange, Sr., awarded the Able Seascout Badges. Scout Executive William F. Livermore assisted in the ceremonies. Skipper Dey P. Chapman, and Mate William Lange, Jr., were in charge of "the side boys."

The auditorium was decorated with ship signal flags, and at one end of the room was the Bridge of Honor with wheel, and binnacle. During the twelve dance numbers the Bridge was occupied by the orchestra. Entrance to the auditorium was gained by boarding the ship over the gangway with the customary salutes.

Awards for the evening were made to ordinary Seascouts Reginald Brindley, H. D. Clemens, Elvin Cooney, Joseph DeSaut, R. M. Duerr, Donald Hand, C. H. Lear, Joseph Rembe, Paul Rothamel, and Arthur Worrell of the Rainbow Clipper of Yardley; Lewis Hartman, Robert McGorgie, Jack Scarborough, and Joseph Wilk of the Seascout Ship Wasp of Andalusia; and H. Audsley, E. G. Brambley, H. L. McGoldrick, L. Sharp, and F. Wagner

EXPECT BIG VOTE IN ALL BUCKS COUNTY AT THE ELECTION

NEARLY 1000 VOTE HERE

Three Districts in Bristol Township Are Very Active

Indications all point to a huge vote being polled today in Bristol, and throughout the other sections of Bucks County. Workers of both major parties are exceedingly active and the number of non-voters is going to reach a new low mark.

In Bristol Borough during the early hours that the polls were open, a total of 859 ballots had been cast. The fifth ward, second precinct, led with 146, but other districts were working hard and during the later hours their figures were increased.

The second ward polling place was crowded and the election officers were working like trojans, in an effort to keep pace with the rush of voters.

Out in Bristol Township there was great activity in all three districts with Newportville district in the lead during the early morning. Newportville had polled 153 votes before 10 o'clock. Croydon was second with 115, while Edgely was third with 103. The total vote in the three township districts at 10 o'clock was 371.

Nearly a thousand voters had gone to the 10 polling places in Bristol borough shortly before noon today. The two districts in the fifth ward were in the lead where 146 votes were polled in the second precinct and 139 in the first.

First ward, first precinct, 56; second precinct, 70; second ward, 127; third ward, 83; fourth ward, first precinct, 89; second precinct, 39; fifth ward, first precinct, 130; second precinct, 146; sixth ward, first precinct, 74; second precinct, 45.

The polling places will close at seven o'clock.

No idea could be obtained this morning as to the vote on the Sunday movie question in Bristol. It was generally considered though that it would carry as there appeared to be no organized opposition.

The Republican ticket in Bucks County should win by a large majority today, because of the big enrollment of Republicans in Bucks County and the effort that is being made to get the voters of all parties out to vote.

The campaign has been vigorously fought and there is keen interest on all sides in the contest.

Yardley's Main Street Subject of Discussion

YARDLEY, Nov. 5.—The problem of Main street was again the subject for discussion at a long session of Yardley Borough Council, Friday evening. Upon motion by David H. Anderson, chairman of the street department, steps will be taken through the borough attorney to lift the injunction placed through the Bucks County Court early in the Summer, against the removal of the rails in Main street. This injunction was placed against Frank Milnor, Trenton, N. J., when removal of the rails was started, with no assurance that the thoroughfare would be restored to its original good condition.

It is anticipated that within three weeks operations will be started on this highway, since the state has assured its willingness to co-operate by a special message to George H. Younger, who has made several contacts with the state highway department. Plans will be made by the council to secure W.P.A. funds to assist with the removal of the decayed ties, after Milnor has removed the rails.

The Street Department has completed the extension of Morgan avenue to Florence avenue, and then to River Drive; and plans were made for a drain to be erected near the home of Roy Hambright to take care of the surface water, diverting it to a ditch near the canal. The light committee was authorized to install two new lights on Main street, one near the creek bridge on North Main, and one opposite the Yardley National Bank; while one light is to be moved from the property of A. J. Cadwallader to the curve near the home of Mrs. Helen M. C. Barnes.

A zoning enabling ordinance was read and passed, which provides for the appointment of a zoning commission to be named by council. The secretary was requested to send letters to a number of property holders on College avenue, bringing to their attention the condition of the pavement on their property, which has become dangerous for the travel of school children.

LURE OF THE PLANETS

The planetarium, a new type of show house which reproduces on the inside of a darkened dome the stars, constellations and planets, and illustrates their motions through the sky, seems to have established itself beyond question as a highly popular form of entertainment and instruction.

It was one of the surprises of the recent Chicago exposition that throngs of visitors would desert the gaudy attractions of the Midway to sit in the planetarium familiarizing themselves with the wonders of the heavens. A similar place, recently opened in New York, has caused equal astonishment, for outdoing the night clubs and the theaters along Broadway. It is filled day after day with eager spectators.

For the city so fortunate as to have one, a planetarium is clearly as great an amusement and educational asset as a park, a zoo, a library or an art collection. Undoubtedly in time a city that without one will feel itself poor and underprivileged.

Unfortunately first class plants of this kind are so expensive to build and operate that few communities can hope to acquire them with public funds. We suggest that the next wealthy man who desires to confer a gift on his city and at the same time perpetuate his name, do so by giving a planetarium and—what better way could there be?—associating his name with the stars.

HIGH COST OF BAD HEALTH

Louis I. Dublin, health statistician, asserts that the total economic value of human beings in the United States—their revenue-producing value—is about 1,500 billion dollars, as opposed to all material and animal wealth in the country of 321 billion dollars.

He asserts that the economic loss by preventable deaths is 6 billion dollars yearly, while 2 1/4 billion are lost through illness sufficient to incapacitate the sick from working.

It is clear, without raising the question of humanity, much less sentimentality, that public money spent for health protection and education will be repaid many times over by reducing unnecessary deaths and sickness.

It is not a question of liking "the more abundant life"; it is a question of paying for it.

The treasury reports that 85 $10,000 bills, included in the old-style currency called in 1929, are still outstanding. Probably somebody lighted cigars with them in the old boom days.

CHAPTER XXXIV

"So sorry to have kept you from your other guests—and your wife, Mr. Damerell. Shall we return? I must be going soon myself."

"No, no, please don't go," begged Kent. "I'll come right back and we'll finish the dance. Please?"

Sharlene had gone. Julie put her hand in Kent's and smiled up at him with a new promise in her eyes.

"If you really wish it—yes," she whispered.

Sharlene clutched Leigh in passing and confided to him with dancing eyes: "Kent's flirting with my future star and has her ga-ga. Isn't he clever?"

"Oh, brother's got a way with the women," Leigh acknowledged. "Before he's through she'll be begging him on her knees to let her have a contract with this company!"

They both laughed. But when Sharlene had gone on, Leigh looked after her with a worried little pucker on his brow.

"You don't think it's too extreme, dear?" Mrs. Standing asked, looking humorously down at the gored skirt and the little jacket, and the sleeves faintly suggesting legs of mutton.

She was selecting a travelling frock at one of the shops in the hotel, while Sharlene sat by approving.

"Extreme! When you were just such things before I was born?"

"I know. But they do seem funny after we've enjoyed the freedom of short skirts and no waistline for so long." Then to the saleswoman: "I'll take it."

"Thank you, Mrs. Standing. I'll send it out immediately."

"Be sure and do so. I'm leaving tomorrow night."

"Without fail, Mrs. Standing."

"Oh, dear!" sighed Sharlene as she slipped her arm in her mother's and turned to the door. "I do so hate to have you go back."

"So do I, but Sister wants me—and you know my fear of becoming the traditional mother-in-law."

"Silly!" exclaimed Sharlene. They were on their way up toward the lobby. "Kent loves you."

"I don't know whether he does or not. He's been too busy to find out. But he has never seemed like my own boy as Stuart—" She stopped abruptly, flushing.

Sharlene laughed. "Don't be old-fashioned, dear. You must keep up with the times and speak nonchalantly of any of your sons-in-law at any time!"

"I suppose so," Mrs. Standing conceded drily. "But I'm not as 'modern' as I used to think I was."

"Modern? My love—you and I have never known the meaning of the word. I'm just beginning to find out since I joined the movie colony—Oh, I have an inspiration! Let's go to the the dancin'!"

"Oh, my dear—it will be so noisy."

"But you'll see the haunt of the mimes—and the pageant of the hungry well-dressed little extra girls hoping to be mistaken for stars, tangoing with the Hollywood gallants of all descriptions..."

So they found themselves at a table at the the dancin' presently. A spectral green illumination, simulating moonlight, fell on the crowded dance floor while the orchestra sighed and sobbed through a "Blues" number.

"Wait till the lights come on," said Sharlene. "I'll pick you out a star—why, there's Julie!"

"Where?"

"With the huge pointed fox around her shoulders—"

"I see her. . . Sharlene—she's with—"

"Yes," Sharlene nodded and smiled. "She's with my husband."

"Kent is paying her a lot of attention. Mother, for business reasons. You know he wants to sign her up for his pictures as soon as she's through with her present contract."

Mrs. Standing made no comment but she did observe how engrossed Kent was with Julie and how close he held her. Sharlene was ordering their tea. The dance came to an end and the diminutive girl under the spectacular fur scarf disappeared from the floor with her escort.

"You're really not jealous over her, Sharlene?" Mrs. Standing spoke after the waiter had left them and she had spent some moments in contemplation of her daughter's serene face.

"Jealous? Why, no, dear. You know of it."

"Yes, some women would be."

"But that's impossible, if two people love each other the way Kent and I do."

The tea came and they sipped it. The music began again. Mrs. Standing moved closer to her daughter and spoke softly:

"I'm going to break over and be disagreeable and give you some advice, my dear. It's a funny place to do it in but I may not have another opportunity. It's just this: I think you give too much."

"What? Why, what do you mean, mother?"

"I mean—devotion."

Sharlene thought for a moment. Then a lovely smile lit her face. "I can never give him enough of devotion—and faith—to make up for—"

"Nonsense!" declared Mrs. Standing sharply. Then more gently: "I mean, you can carry it too far. To put it bluntly, a man likes to be kept guessing."

"Mother's there isn't a question of that with Kent—"

"Strangers! H'm. . . I wish I'd seen him, but perhaps it's just as well. He probably holds no fond memories of me."

"Mother, Stuart always loved 'Emily.' His last—and only—concern, when we agreed to separate, was lest you should be hurt."

"Really? The dear boy!" she sighed. "The next time I come I'm going to hunt him up."

"Do. He'll be glad to see you, I know. Here's Morton."

After she had sent her mother on her way, Sharlene turned back to the Art Gallery. The big, quiet room was deserted as she stepped in. She recognized instantly the large canvas on the opposite wall, she knew Stuart's work so well. It gave her a totally unexpected thrill.

She went slowly toward it and stood transfixed before it.

"Yes," Sharlene nodded and smiled. "She's with my husband."

"He likes particularly to play games, doesn't he?"

"Marriage isn't a game!" Mrs. Standing shrugged. "To a person of his temperament love is a game!"

"I see. . . You think Julie—" "I don't think anything! Certainly not that person. But my advice is—don't give so much. Be more elusive, don't let him be so sure of you."

"Mother!" Sharlene cried indignantly, her face dyed crimson. "That's cheap! It isn't necessary for me to hold my husband by stooping to lies and pretensions!"

"It shouldn't be necessary," stressed Mrs. Standing.

"Believe me, it isn't!" Sharlene said with entire conviction. "Appearances have led you to false deductions. His being here with Julie—it's absurd!" She laughed comfortably and pulled her coat around her. "Will you go with me to the Gallery here in the hotel, to see Stuart's picture?"

"I think I'll run along to Mrs. Jordan's instead. You see, I—I saw it yesterday, dear."

"You did? Why didn't you tell me?"

"I don't know. Old-fashioned embarrassment about former husbands, I expect."

"You're so quaint about it, Mother. Why, I told Kent I was coming to see the picture and he agreed to meet me here at five. It's nearly that now. We'd better be going. I'll send you on with Morton because Kent will have his car."

"Do you ever run into Stuart?" Mrs. Standing asked as they waited in the lobby after Sharlene had sent for the car.

"I haven't yet—but I know I may see him any day. I don't imagine either of us will be the least bit fussed. The incident is closed up and we'd meet as strangers."

action. The whole picture was in action. . .

Sharlene's eyes remained fixed in fascination on that great kingly face, darkly handsome, austere, but with the tragedies of all his subjects carried in his sorrowful eyes.

She followed the gaze of those eyes out to the vast background of the canvas. It was the marble-dam at Raj Samand in process of building. Herdes of black, almost naked men toiled with blocks of white marble. In the shadow of the completed portion, women fed hungry children.

Almost it seemed as if the great King smiled on these, his little ones, Sharlene thought, as her eyes travelled back to his face. Then she saw his back-thrust, imperious right hand and followed its action to the dim, cool, silken tent from which he had emerged. A woman, veiled, jewelled, gorgeously beautiful, crouched on the rugs beneath his hand. She held a child in her arms, a child wrapped, fat, contented. But the mother was looking up at her lord with resentment and hurt vanity in her voluptuous eyes, while in the deeper shadows the ladies of the purdah smiled and nudged each other, pleased with the discomfort of the favorite. Why had the master thrust her thus so ruthlessly aside?

"Oh," thought Sharlene, "he is saying that love is thrust aside for work!" Hastily she turned to see a catalogue from the desk from which the attendant had departed. Swiftly she scanned the pages. "No. 29—Stuart Pennington. PATERNITY." She went back to the picture. Paternity! She would have called it "Work." Stuart thrust everything aside for work. Even love really meant work in his life. This was his love. These—pictures like this—were his children.

"He shook," she thought laughingly, personally, without even a change of color. He even met Sharlene's startled eyes tranquilly as if she were a casual acquaintance. Nothing else could so completely have convinced his former wife of his indifference. If he had cared about—or hated—her, he could not have been so remote. She acknowledged that he was quite cured, and was thankful. Only, with feminine perversity, she was also a little bit sorry.

CHAPTER XXXV

She spent nearly an hour in contemplation of the canvas, resenting it, admiring the detail, recalling Raj Samand, finally giving Stuart unstinted praise. Then she awoke to the fact that Kent was long overdue. She glanced at her watch, frowned a little, and laughed aloud suddenly at the thought that his movie protégé was keeping him.

The sound of that familiar musical laugh reached Stuart Pennington, outside, as he was crossing the floor toward the main Gallery. He halted, thinking his ears must have tricked him, and then went softly toward the door.

Stuart recognized that tall, lovely form as Sharlene stood, back turned, looking up at his picture. She was alone! What had made her laugh?

The subject of the picture was hardly mirth-provoking. What chord of the past had been touched to evoke that gay response? He entered the gallery so quietly that she was not aware of him. He came down hesitatingly, wishing that he might see the expression on her face and not be seen. How still she was, how intent. . . Then he heard rapid footsteps approaching outside and turned his back to the door, pretending to study a picture—an enormous canvas, not painted to be studied at such close range.

Kent Damerell came in hastily, flushed and frowning with irritation because of the apology he was going to have to make to his wife. She did not turn and he glanced at the other occupant of the room who was also turned away, apparently absorbed in a picture. He recognized instantly that burnished bare head. Was this some kind of an intrigue? Before he had time to make up his mind Sharlene glanced at her watch casually, sighed and turned.

"Oh, there you are, Kent!" she said gladly and went toward him. "When did you come in?" Kent saw that she wasn't acting. She was unaware, quite evidently, of the other man standing in the poorly lit end of the room. The situation pleased him.

"Sweetheart," he said with unusual warmth, "I'm so sorry to have kept you—"

"That's all right, dear," she assured him smilingly, responding like a flower to sunshine. "I never mind waiting, when you're at the other end of the gag!"

"Listen to that movie lingo," he chortled and hugged her quickly. "You darling!"

Stuart kept his back turned determinedly but of course he could not help hearing every word of this tender passage. He was embarrassed at his predicament and hoped fervently that they would leave without discovering him, as they were blocking his only exit.

"Kent, you must look at Stuart's picture before we go. It's a beautiful thing!"

"The big one over there?" Following her glance he was silent for a moment, surveying it. "He's gone in for black subjects, eh? Never cared much for the black-and-tans myself."

"No, no!" Sharlene remonstrated. "This is a great Rajput king in India."

"Doesn't interest me either. Come on, love, let's go home." Then in a lower voice, "You beautiful baby—"

"Silly. . . Wait, I'll put this catalogue back—"

"Stuart!" she cried when she could get her breath.

He turned and bowed and Kent saw, to his chagrin, that he was suppressing a smile. "How do you do?" he said cheerfully. "I couldn't help hearing your comments on my picture, Damerell, and I'm smiling but I'm shook."

"He shook," she thought laughingly, personally, without even a change of color. He even met Sharlene's startled eyes tranquilly as if she were a casual acquaintance. Nothing else could so completely have convinced his former wife of his indifference. If he had cared about—or hated—her, he could not have been so remote. She acknowledged that he was quite cured, and was thankful. Only, with feminine perversity, she was also a little bit sorry.

"Thanks."

"Come along, Sharlene," urged Kent, taking her arm in his large, possessive way, "we're going to be late to the Farrington dinner."

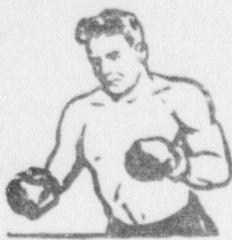

Sharlene drew in her breath sharply. It was reminiscent of another night—another husband. "We're going to be late to the Farrington dinner." But Stuart did not flicker an eyelash. He had successfully forgotten his Prince Consort days. Kent conducted her toward the door, hand on her arm.

"Don't mind my criticism, Pennington," Kent threw over

JENKINTOWN JAYVEES DEFEAT HIGH SCHOOL

(By Jack Orr)

For the second consecutive week the Bristol High Jayvees figured in a game in which the victors were decided by the costly extra point. But today they were on the losing end of the count, dropping their first game of the season to Jenkintown, 7-6, at Jenkintown yesterday.

The conversion which won the ball game for the Red and Blue yesterday was gained by a line buck, "Cage" Montgomery smashing the forward wall for the deciding tally. Quarterback Ray Unruh chose to smash the line in preference to the more dangerous kicking attempt.

The home team's touchdown came in the opening stanza. After an exchange of punts, the Jenkintown eleven started their forward passing combination and scored. Three passes in a row from Unruh to Montgomery gained the necessary six-pointer.

The visitors came back with their bid for triumph as they retaliated with a touchdown in the second period. A brilliant march from midfield with Tomlinson and Dan DiMidio carrying the ball netted a touchdown with Lou Tomlinson scoring from the 12-yard marker.

With the game hanging in the balance, a fake kick was called by quarterback Collier, but a misplaced pass from center gave the ball to the kicker, and the surprised DiMidio was forced to kick. His boot was low and missed the mark.

Bristol piled up seven first downs to the home team's five and gained from scrimmage 85 to 58. Jesse Van Zant and Carm Mignoni stood out on the Bristol defense.

The Cardinal and Gray J. V. now has one win, one tie, and one loss as their mark for this season. Their toughest game of the season comes next week when they combat the strong Cathedral High seconds from Trenton. This game will be played on the local field.

Line-up:

Bristol	position	Jenkintown
Tunis	center	Botto
Brambley	right guard	Penn
VanZant	right tackle	Hedler
Briggs	right end	Getchel
Collier	quarter back	Unruh
Hoffman	left half back	Miller
Tomlinson	right half back	Montgomery
DiMidio	tailback	Lundenslager

Touchdowns: Montgomery, Tomlinson.

TEN ST. ANN'S BOXERS TO BE CARD FEATURE

Ten members of the St. Ann's A. A. boxing team will be featured at the indoor boxing show to be held in the Italian Mutual Aid hall, Monday evening, November 12. The localities will be matched with opponents from Philadelphia.

Matchmaker Mickey Giordano will attempt to secure bouts for the following: Chet Castor, Sam Balocchi, Donato Sclarrs, Harry Davis, Nick Marchetti, Johnny Raccagno, Frank Vannucci, Frank Frascella, Joe Zettler and Vince Della.

Vince Della, sensational Bristol knock-out artist, scored his third straight kayo victory at Wilmington, Del. Friday night, when he knocked out the Southern States champion in thirty-nine seconds of the first round.

The Middle Atlantic district of the Amateur Athletic Union notified Matchmaker Mickey Giordano that Hall Goodwin, Middle Atlantic lightweight champion, has been suspended until he meets Harry Davis, Bristol's colored ace.

There will be six hundred general admission tickets on sale and four hundred reserved seats to be sold. Reserved seats are on sale at the St. Ann's club-house now.

CROYDON

Miss Marie Fisher entertained friends from Philadelphia over the week-end.

On Friday evening, Mrs. A. Jayne and daughter enjoyed a trip to West Chester with the Rev. Robert Fraser, where they sang with a choir. On Sunday they visited with the Rev. Fraser's choir at a church at Locustwood Park, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roberts have announced the engagement of their daughter, Bertha, Croydon, to Ray Clark, Philadelphia.

The Ladies' Bible class of Wilkinson Memorial Church enjoyed a masque party at the home of Mrs. G. Beck, Second, avenue, Thursday evening.

UNDEFEATED MT. HOLLY TEAM TO OPPOSE "RECS"

The Bristol Recreation Center football team will travel to Mount Holly Sunday afternoon to play the undefeated Mount Holly Grads. St. Ann's A. A. was originally scheduled to meet the Jersey club but after a conference between Manager Thomas Juno, St. Ann's, and Manager Eddie McDevitt, of the Recs, it was decided to have the strongest Bristol representation meet the Jerseyites.

St. Ann's is badly crippled for this Sunday, six players having been lost by injuries in the last two games. The "Saints" will most likely meet the Morrisville Tigers on their home field, Sunday afternoon.

WELL—HE'S GONE

GIVING UP PURSUIT OF "SPORT," PAT RETURNS TO THE HOTEL TO TAKE OSWALDO INTO CUSTODY

PAT BRINGS WALLY OSWALDO TO THE LOCAL POLICE STATION FOR SAFE-KEEPING UNTIL HE CAN BE EXTRADITED

SAY—THEY'VE BEEN WANTED FOR MONTHS AND YOU HAVEN'T PICKED THEM UP—AND DON'T NAME ME ANY MORE NAMES OR I'LL WHACK YOU RIGHT ON THE NOSE
